Zoe the Seed: Wings of Change

Ahead of International Mandela Day, jazz vocalist and songwriter Zoe the Seed will perform her "Winds of Change" concert on Friday, July 14 at 6pm at the Luthuli Museum in Groutville. The concert is presented by iSupport Creative Business and support by Concerts SA.

Hailing from Swaziland, but having lived in KwaZulu-Natal for over 15 years, Zoe the Seed draws inspiration from the culture, stories and values of the Zulu people for her music. Her "Winds of Change" concert seeks to remind listeners of Nelson Mandela's legacy and the winds of change he brought that continue to challenge issues like unemployment, gender-based violence and human rights.

Zoe says "A mirror of reflection through song helps us continue these conversations to blow us in the direction of change."

The concert will feature Zoe's soulful vocals and thought-provoking lyrics, performed against the backdrop of the historic Luthuli Museum. The museum honours Chief Albert Luthuli, a leader in the struggle against apartheid and Nobel Peace Prize laureate.

Zoe the seed is a Swazi born vocalist and songwriter who holds a bachelor's degree in performance for jazz and popular music. Having found her passion for jazz early in life, she has become increasingly experimental in her expression, blending soul, reggae, and gospel music, while tackling deep emotion in her lyrical content. By day, Zoe is a vocal and ear training facilitator. She is always showcasing her own compositions, many of which are written in her mother tongue, SiSwati. Her music has become increasingly influential in African jazz, promoting love, respect, and standing against women and child abuse with each performance.

Tickets for the "Winds of Change" concert are R50 and available at the door or on Webtickets.
